The National Digital Library of India (NDLI) is an online collection of educational materials that offers a wide range of services to the learning community in addition to search and browse capabilities. Through its National Mission on Education through Information and Communication Technology, the Ministry of Education, Government of India, sponsors and mentors it (NMEICT). To enable focused searching so that students can locate the appropriate resource quickly and with the least amount of effort, federated and filtered searching is used. Services tailored to particular user groups are offered by NDLI, such as test preparation for college and high school students and job seekers. Additionally, services are offered to general learners and researchers. The purpose of NDLI is to support the ten most commonly used Indian languages on the interface and store material in any language. All academic levels—including researchers and lifelong learners—as well as all disciplines, popular access devices, and learners with disabilities are supported by its design. It is intended to let researchers conduct interconnected investigation from various sources and to help individuals learn from and get ready for global best practices. Indian Institute of Technology Kharagpur is where it is developed, run, and maintained. Digital Resources was supplied by the National Digital Library.

The screenshot shows the homepage of the National Digital Library of India (NDLI). The header includes the NDLI logo, the text 'National Digital Library of India', and a search bar. Below the header, there are logos for the Indian Institute of Technology Kharagpur and the Ministry of Education, Government of India. The main content area features a large banner with the text 'One Library All of India' and a search bar. Below the banner, there are six categories of digital resources: School Education, Higher Education, Research, Career Development, Cultural Archives, and Newspaper Archives.
